

Sam Bartram Statue Fund

For many years now, Charlton supporters have felt that the club should commemorate in some way, our all-time leading appearance holder and, arguably, greatest ever player, legendary goalkeeper, Sam Bartram.

With the club's Centenary Season being celebrated in 2004/05, it would appear to be the perfect opportunity to do just that. The club's Centenary Committee, which includes another Charlton legend Derek Ufton, supporter director Sue Townsend and newly appointed Chairman of the BBC, Michael Grade, has instigated a project to erect a statue of Sam at The Valley as a permanent memorial to one of the club's greatest ever servants.

Eminent Blackheath-based sculptor, Anthony Hawken, a self-confessed Charlton fan who actually saw Bartram play at The Valley, has undertaken a series of studies which have led to him being able to produce a miniature of how the statue may look, along with a more detailed model of Sam's head, which when seeing it for the first time, prompted Derek Ufton, a playing colleague of Sam's, to remark 'that's Sammy'. The Centenary Committee believes it is important that all fans have the chance to contribute to this lasting memorial to a true Charlton great.

We are now inviting supporters to make a donation towards the costs of the statue, which we hope to unveil on the club's 100th birthday in June 2005. If you would like to contribute, please complete the donation form below.

The club's 100th season gives us the ideal opportunity to finally pay tribute to a man who has become synonymous with our great club. I hope that as many of our fans as possible will help us to fulfil this dream.
